1. Introduction

- 1.1 The Police Service of Scotland recognises that although the vast majority of football supporters are law abiding and are passionate about the game and their team, a minority of supporters engage in inappropriate or criminal behaviour at football, including hate crime, violence, disorder and anti-social behaviour.
- 1.2 No single organisation can fully tackle these issues in isolation and this National Strategy sets out the commitment of the Police Scotland Football and Events Working Group (FEWG) members to jointly deliver a secure environment that will keep people safe whilst enjoying the national game.
- 1.3 The FEWG members are:
- British Transport Police (BTP);
 - Crown Office and Procurator Fiscal Service (COPFS);
 - Football Safety Officers' Association Scotland (FSOAS);
 - Police Scotland;
 - Scottish Football Association (Scottish FA);
 - Scottish Government; and
 - Scottish Professional Football League (SPFL)

2. Our Vision

- 2.1 Scotland's national game is free from hatred, violence, disorder and anti-social behaviour.

3. Strategic Objectives

- 3.1 All member organisations of the FEWG are committed to working together in order to achieve three key strategic objectives:
- Provide a safe and secure environment where everyone can enjoy our national game;
 - Provide a consistent, professional approach to the policing of football across Scotland; and
 - Eradicate hate crime, violence, disorder and anti-social behaviour from Scottish football.

4. Key Issues

4.1 There are a number of key issues when considering the strategic objectives:

4.2 Hate Crime

4.2.1 Hate crime remains an unwelcome feature of the Scottish game and although in recent seasons there have been decreases in such offending, there is a small but persistent minority of football supporters who continue to commit offences at football.

4.2.2 Hate crime is a motivated crime based on prejudice that occurs when a perpetrator targets a victim because of their perceived membership of a certain group. On occasion hate crime can become violent as a result of this.

4.2.3 There are currently five social groups protected under hate crime legislation:

- Disability or perceived disability (any disability including physical disability, learning and mental health);
- Race or perceived race (any racial group, ethnic background or national origin, including countries within the UK and Gypsy/Traveller groups);
- Religion or perceived religion (any religious group, including those who have no faith);
- Sexual orientation or perceived sexual orientation (sexual orientation towards persons of the same sex or of the opposite sex or towards both);
- Transgender identity or perceived transgender identity (defined as transvestism, transsexualisms, intersexuality or having by virtue of the Gender Recognition Act 2004 (c7), changed gender and any other gender identity that is not standard male or female gender identity. This refers to a whole range of people who find their gender identity or gender expression differs in some way from the gender assumptions made by others about them when they were born).

4.2.4 On 26 January 2017 the Scottish Government announced an independent review of hate crime legislation in Scotland. The review, chaired by Lord Bracadale, was given a remit of considering:

‘whether existing hate crime law represent the most effective approach for the justice system to deal with criminal conduct motivated by hatred, malice, ill-will or prejudice.’

4.2.5 Lord Bracadale’s Independent Review of Hate Crime Legislation in Scotland Final Report was published on 31 May 2018 and makes 22 recommendations for Scottish Ministers to consider.

4.2.6 FEWG members recognise that there will be opportunities to positively engage with any resultant Scottish Government consultation exercises to consider implementation of these recommendations.

4.3 Violence, Disorder and Anti-Social Behaviour

4.3.1 Football is a vehicle for a significant minority of football supporters in Scotland to engage in violence, disorder and anti-social behaviour. There is always the potential for spontaneous disorder but in many cases football-related disorder and violence is pre-planned, often involving individuals who are known to clubs or police. In tackling disorder and violence, there must be an emphasis on intelligence gathering, information sharing, training, planning and enforcement so that all organisations can fulfil their functions effectively.

4.4 Supporters

4.4.1 Engagement with football supporters is crucial to delivering safe and secure events. Football supporters are not merely customers but in many cases invest emotionally as well as financially in their club and harnessed effectively, this can be a powerful driving force. Conversely, failure to appreciate the role of supporters presents a risk of generating ill-feeling and a lack of cooperation.

4.4.2 The concept of holding clubs responsible for their supporters' inappropriate or criminal actions regardless of measures taken in mitigation is commonly known as 'strict liability' and is the approach used by organisations such as the European football governing body (UEFA) and the English FA. This system is not in place in Scotland and there have been requests from respected bodies such as the anti-sectarian charity Nil by Mouth and the Scottish Government Independent Advisory Group on Tackling Sectarianism in Scotland to address this issue, either by introducing 'strict liability' or a suitable alternative.

4.4.3 There are opportunities to introduce initiatives to promote responsible behaviour such as non-segregation matches involving clubs where the risk of disorder is low or through publicising the charity work done by many supporters' groups. This could assist in counteracting an impression that the authorities concentrate on the negative aspects of the ill-behaved minority while failing to give credit to the majority who use football as a positive influence.

4.4.4 The SPFL and the Scottish FA have put in place new measures and associated guidelines on unacceptable conduct. These measures are welcome, and data has been collected during season 2017-18, which will allow the effectiveness to be assessed.

4.4.5 The developing network of Supporter Liaison Officers will also present an opportunity for the authorities to engage meaningfully with supporters.

4.5 Children and Young People

4.5.1 When a child or young person offends it is important to understand why they offended and endeavour to identify the risks they pose themselves and others. By understanding why the child or young person has offended and identify any associated wellbeing needs, agencies will be better placed to intervene. Having suitable interventions to address such behaviour will help divert and educate them in relation to the hurt and harm caused by football-related offending and prevent future offending.

4.5.2 The Police Scotland Pitchin' in Programme provides a series of up to five inputs designed to engage and educate young people on the risks associated with football-related offending and to assist them in making suitable life choices. Currently this programme can be delivered in schools or by community trusts or clubs by a combination of police officers, teachers or coaching staff.

4.6 Pyrotechnics

4.6.1 Pyrotechnics have become a regular feature of Scottish football and present a clear risk to the safety of all at football. As with other types of offending, there must be an emphasis on intelligence gathering, information sharing, training, planning and enforcement so that all organisations can fulfil their functions effectively.

4.7 Misuse of Alcohol

4.7.1 The consumption of alcohol is an integral part of many supporters' match day experience, however the misuse of alcohol is a contributory factor in many instances of football-related offending. There is therefore a need for the relevant authorities to balance the enjoyment of responsible drinkers with the requirement to prevent offending related to over-consumption of alcohol.

5. Commitments

5.1 Much of the work to deliver the strategic objectives is underway and all FEWG member organisations are committed to continuing the work already undertaken to improve the relationships and working practices associated with the delivery of safe and enjoyable football fixtures.

5.2 Continued implementation of the strategy to meet the objectives can be achieved through the adoption of a number of commitments which will ensure all FEWG member organisations fulfil their obligations. The commitments for season 2018-19 are:

1. FEWG members will engage in genuine open engagement with supporters and representative organisations to build upon existing relationships and develop new relationships within a trusting environment;

2. FEWG members will maintain regular constructive and meaningful dialogue with each other on all current and emerging football-related matters;
3. FEWG members will share all relevant information and intelligence in line with Data Protection Principles;
4. FEWG members will continue to challenge and, where appropriate, sanction unacceptable or criminal behaviour but will also look for opportunities to introduce and better publicise initiatives or incidents related to responsible behaviour;
5. FEWG members will ensure all relevant staff are fully trained to carry out their role, including adopting the sharing of training materials and working practices where appropriate to ensure a safe and consistent approach;
6. FEWG members will ensure they develop and implement strategies to reduce the harm caused by over-consumption of alcohol associated with football;
7. FEWG members will collectively seek methods of further addressing the dangers of pyrotechnic devices associated with football;
8. FEWG members will look collectively at identifying other organisations that can assist with programmes to support the strategic objectives;
9. FEWG members will use all measures available, including education, diversion and enforcement, to remove offenders from the game;
10. The Scottish FA and SPFL will minimise the impact of fixture scheduling on communities through consultation with Police Scotland and communities where appropriate prior to fixtures being published and prior to any re-arranged matches; and
11. The Scottish FA and SPFL will continue to work towards ensuring clubs take greater responsibility for the behaviour of their fans at both home and away fixtures, building on the new measures and guidelines introduced to address unacceptable conduct.

6. Measurement and Review

6.1 The FEWG will monitor:

- Scottish Government religiously aggravated offending statistics;
- COPFS reports on hate crime;
- Information from supporter representatives and organisations;
- The numbers and types of FBO imposed;
- Data gathered by the football authorities on unacceptable conduct; and
- Information from external bodies which informs football-related policy development, including academic research or other sources.

6.2 The FEWG will review the progress in relation to the commitments at each FEWG meeting.

7. Outcomes

7.1 The outcomes this Strategy is intended to produce are:

- Reduction of recorded incidents of hate crime, violence, disorder and anti-social behaviour associated with football;
- Improved partnership working to ensure a proportionate and consistent approach to policing football;
- Improved engagement with football supporters and representative organisations;
- Increased public confidence in football policing;
- Proportionate disposal in terms of issuing Football Banning Orders; and
- Increased use of diversionary programmes especially for young people who offend.
