Having considered your request in terms of the Act, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

OFFICIAL

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, crimes in Scotland are recorded in accordance with the Scottish Government Justice Department offence classification codes, many of which cover more than one piece of legislation.

The offence set out at s127 of the Communications (Scotland) Act 2003 can be covered by the following offence classification codes:

- 'Communications Act 2003 (sexual)'
- 'General post office/ telecommunications offences' (which covers non-sexual content)

Whilst the first classification is specific to section 127 offences, the second includes a number of other offences set out in different legislation including the Mobile Telephones Act 2002, the Post Office Act 1953, the Postal Services Act 2000 and the Telecommunications Act 1984.

Unfortunately, it is not possible to ascertain which of the General post office/ telecommunications offences relate to section 127 of the Communications (Scotland) Act 2003 without an individual assessment of each case.

Furthermore, the crime recording systems used by Police Scotland have no facility whereby a search can be carried out based on the gender of the accused or whether the offence was initially recorded as something else, i.e. stalking.

As illustrated by our published statistics, there are a vast number of reports which would require individual assessment – an exercise which I estimate would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.

Should you require any further assistance please contact Information Management Dundee, quoting the reference number given.
