FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

- The number of fines given out to people for riding bikes, e-bikes and e-scooters on pavements from 2017 to 2022 (the most recent data you have). Please could you divide the data by year (and by vehicle, if possible)?

Having considered your request in terms of the Act, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, Police Scotland records crimes in line with the Scottish Government Justice Department crime classification codes. There are no specific classifications that pertain to your request. The potentially relevant classifications include all vehicle types and it would not be possible therefore to provide information specifically for cycles/electric bikes/scooters within the cost limit.

Should you require any further assistance please contact Information Management - Dundee at foi@scotland.police.uk quoting the reference number given.

If you are dissatisfied with the way in which Police Scotland has dealt with your request, you are entitled, in the first instance, to request a review of our actions and decisions.

If you remain dissatisfied following the outcome of that review, you are thereafter entitled to apply to the Office of the Scottish Information Commissioner within six months for a decision.
