FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

Could you please provide an annual breakdown for each of the years 2016-2022 for the number of sexual offences reported to the Police where the suspect was a teacher?

Could you please break this down by region in Scotland?

Could you please provide an annual breakdown for each of the years 2016-2022 for the number of sexual offences reported to the Police where the suspect was a teacher and the victim was a pupil?

Could you please break this down by region in Scotland?

In response to these questions, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, the crime recording systems used by Police Scotland have no facility whereby the occupation of the accused can be easily extracted, nor is it possible to carry out a search by occupation of the accused at the time of the offence.

The only way to provide an accurate response to your request would be to individually examine all sexual offences to establish the occupation of the accused, for the time period requested.

As illustrated by our published statistics, this would involve case by case assessment of thousands of sexual crimes - an exercise which I estimate would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.
