FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

I am looking to find out how many times since the inception of Police Scotland has a person been charged with the offence of Attempted Murder where the reported victim did not require any medical treatment.

Having considered your request in terms of the Act, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, the only way to provide an accurate response to your request would be to manually examine each and every crime report of attempted murder from 1 April 2013 to establish whether medical treatment is detailed. This is an exercise which would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.

To illustrate, between 2013 and 2019 there are more than 1,700 detected attempted murder crimes. Unfortunately, the only way to access this specific data is via each individual crime report.
