FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

The number of convictions/enforcements that have been enacted since the implementation of the 20 MPH Legislation as regards the Pitlochry Area.

And further, in the wider context and as a secondary request within all of the Perth and Kinross Council area.

In response to these questions, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, crimes in Scotland are recorded in accordance with the Scottish Government Justice Department offence classification codes and are not thereafter sub-categorised.

In this instance, any such incident would be recorded under the general classification of 'Speeding'.

The crime recording systems used by Police Scotland have no facility whereby the particular speed at which vehicles were travelling, nor the speed limit breached, can be easily extracted.

As such, the only way to determine whether a 20mph speed limit was breached would be to carry out case by case assessment of all Speeding offences in the area, from when 20mph zones were introduced in 2020.

As illustrated by our published statistics, this would involve individually examining thousands of crime reports - an exercise which I estimate would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.
