FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

Please provide me with data relating to all knife crime incidents which have occurred in hospitals that this police force has been called to, from the beginning of 2011 to the end of 2020.

In response to this question, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, the crime recording systems used by Police Scotland have no facility whereby a search can be carried out by locus type, nor is there a facility available which can automatically identify specific premises such as hospitals.

Furthermore, crimes in Scotland are recorded in accordance with the Scottish Government Justice Department offence classification codes and are not thereafter sub-categorised.

The relevant classification in Scotland is 'Use of a knife/ blade' etc. and the only possible way to provide you with an accurate response to your request would be to review each case for the details as to how the knife was used and cross-refer with any separate crime reports for assault, attempted murder etc.

This is an exercise which I estimate would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.

To be of some assistance, general statistics can be found on the Police Scotland website:-
