FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

- In 2018, 2019, 2020 and 2021 – How many break ins in Tayside resulted in property being stolen?
- In 2018, 2019, 2020 and 2021 – How many break ins in Tayside resulted in property being damaged?
- In 2018, 2019, 2020 and 2021 – How many breaks in resulted in physical attack?

Having considered your request in terms of the above Act, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, the crime recording systems used by Police Scotland have no facility whereby this level of information can be automatically retrieved.

Each and every Housebreaking report would need to be reviewed to establish the circumstances of each and where a physical attack has occurred, these incidents would be recorded as separate crimes in accordance with the Scottish Government Justice Department offence classification codes – Assault etc.

As illustrated by our published statistics, a vast number of crime reports would need to be individually examined - an exercise which I estimate would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.

If it would be of some interest however, in terms of question 1, we would be able to provide a breakdown of Housebreaking codes, i.e. attempted housebreaking, housebreaking with intent to steal and actual housebreakings.
