FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

- Can you tell me how many reports of thefts of petrol or diesel directly from someone's car there have been for each month since the start of 2021.
- Can you give me this information only for the Greater Glasgow and Edinburgh areas.
- I would also be interested in seeing any further details about the crimes, IE, circumstances of how they were carried out

Having considered this question in terms of the Act, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, the only way to provide an accurate response to your request would be to manually examine each and every crime report in relation to several classifications of crimes of dishonesty to establish whether fuel from vehicles is listed as stolen property. This is an exercise which I estimate would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.

To illustrate, the most recent published figures show that for the 2021/22 financial year, there were 3, 172 recorded crimes of common theft and 702 recorded crimes of domestic housebreaking for Edinburgh City Division. Unfortunately, the only way to access a description of items stolen is via each individual crime report. As such this is an exercise which would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.

You can access our published crime statistics, including by council area or Police Division via the following link: How we are performing - Police Scotland

- Can you give me any further information about how these crimes were resolved - IE, if they resulted in prosecution, etc.
