FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

- How many Keyless vehicle thefts have there been in the last 5 years?
- How many Keyless vehicles have been recovered and returned to their owner in the previous five years?

Having considered your request in terms of the above Act, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, crimes in Scotland are recorded in accordance with the Scottish Government Justice Department offence classification and are not thereafter sub-categorised.

In this instance vehicles which have been stolen using a keyless method would be recorded as a Theft of a Motor Vehicle or would be included as property when the offence is Housebreaking. Therefore, the only way to provide an accurate response to your request would be to individually examine each relevant crime report to determine whether it was relevant to your request.

To illustrate, the most recent published figures show that for the 2021/22 financial year, there were 8, 489 reported crimes of Theft by Housebreaking.
