FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

- A copy of any policy document outlining the use of Live Facial Recognition by your force

Police Scotland is not presently using, trialling or testing live facial recognition technology. However, we are keeping a watching brief on the trialling of technology elsewhere.

As such, in terms of Section 17 of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002, this represents a notice that the information requested is not held by Police Scotland.

- A copy of any policy document outlining the use of Retrospective Facial Recognition [other than the searching of custody images on the PND]

I note you have explicitly excluded PND facial searching from this question.

Police Scotland is not presently using, trialling or testing retrospective facial recognition technology as per the definition of your question. However, we are keeping a watching brief on the trialling of technology elsewhere.

As such, in terms of Section 17 of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002, this represents a notice that the information requested is not held by Police Scotland.

- A copy of any policy document outlining the use of Operator Initiated Facial Recognition by your force

Police Scotland is not presently using, trialling or testing operator initiated facial recognition technology. However, we are keeping a watching brief on the trialling of technology elsewhere.

As such, in terms of Section 17 of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002, this represents a notice that the information requested is not held by Police Scotland.

- A copy of any policy document outlining the use of PND "face searching" of custody photos by your force

OFFICIAL

In terms of section 16 of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002, I am refusing to provide you with the information requested.

Section 16 requires Police Scotland when refusing to provide such information because it is exempt, to provide you with a notice which:

- (a) states that it holds the information,
- (b) states that it is claiming an exemption,
- (c) specifies the exemption in question and
- (d) states, if that would not be otherwise apparent, why the exemption applies.

I can confirm that Police Scotland holds the information that you have requested.

The exemptions that I consider to be applicable to the information requested by you are:

Section 31(1) – National Security and Defence

Section 35(1)(a)&(b) – Law Enforcement

Section 39(1) – Health, safety and the environment

Section 31(1) – National Security and Defence

If the information is disclosed it may assist terrorist organisations to identify, with some accuracy, the capabilities of retrospective facial recognition/facial matching used by Police Scotland. This would provide them with a tactical advantage when planning or perpetrating their terrorist plans and activities allowing them to cause the maximum impact of destruction and disruption.

The security of the United Kingdom is of paramount importance and Police Scotland will not disclose further details of such information if it would impact on National Security.

This is a non-absolute exemption and requires the application of the public interest test.

35(1)(a)&(b) – Law Enforcement

The request information, if disclosed, could be used to try and work out how likely detection is likely when retrospective facial recognition/facial matching is deployed. Those with criminal intent would then be in a position to more accurately estimate the chances of being detected or make efforts to evade such detection. Disclosure could have a negative effect on national security should the release of information be used and manipulated by criminal fraternities to try and evade detection or to better plan their activities.

This is a non-absolute exemption and requires the application of the public interest test.

39(1) – Health, safety and the environment

The disclosure of the information requested may have the potential to increase the number of crimes being committed or efforts made by those involved to avoid detection. Any increase in crime presents a risk to operational police officers and members of the public and the potential to present a risk to an individual's personal safety.

This is a non-absolute exemption and requires the application of the public interest test.

Public Interest Test

As you will be aware, the exemptions listed above are non-absolute and require the application of the Public Interest Test. I would suggest that public accountability would favour disclosure, given that the information concerns the efficient and effective use of resources by the Service. Likewise, disclosure of the information would also inform the public debate on the issue of retrospective facial recognition and in particular facial matching in regards to the Police National Database.

Furthermore, the applicability of the exemptions listed above, the need to ensure the effective conduct of the service in relation to prevention and detection of crime and, the public safety considerations involved in the delivery of operational policing clearly favour non-disclosure of the information requested.

It is important to note that the UK does face a serious and sustained threat from violent extremists and this threat is greater in scale and ambition than any terrorist threats in the past. The police service has a duty to promote the safety of all individuals and will not reveal any information that might jeopardise this goal. To provide specific details of retrospective facial recognition/facial matching is likely to place individuals at serious and increased risk and present opportunities for criminals to attempt to evade detection.

On balance I would contend that the public interest in disclosing the information is outweighed by that in maintaining the exemptions listed, as, it is doubtful if it can ever be in the public interest to disclose information which would jeopardise the delivery of policing and the safety of individuals and prejudice the prevention or detection of crime.

- Any documents outlining any plans to trial, introduce or test any kind of facial recognition [Live, Retrospective, Operator Initiated] by your force

I can confirm Police Scotland does not hold any relevant documentation in this regard.

As such, in terms of Section 17 of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002, this represents a notice that the information requested is not held by Police Scotland.

Should you require any further assistance please contact Information Management quoting the reference number given.

If you are dissatisfied with the way in which Police Scotland has dealt with your request, you are entitled, in the first instance, to request a review of our actions and decisions.
