FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your recent request for information which has been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

For ease of reference, your request is replicated below together with the response.

If possible, please could you provide the following information related to cyber crime and its impact on Scottish business.

- 1. The number of Scottish businesses that have reported themselves to be a victim of any cyber crime for 2019, 2020 & 2021.
- 2. The number of Scottish businesses that have reported themselves to be a victim of a cyber crime - specifically cyber fraud - for 2019, 2020 & 2021.
- 3. The number of Scottish businesses that have reported themselves to be a victim of a cyber crime - specifically computer misuse 2019, 2020 & 2021.
- 4. The number of Scottish businesses that have reported themselves to be a victim of a cyber attack for 2019, 2020 & 2021.

In response to your request, I regret to inform you that I am unable to provide you with the information you have requested, as it would prove too costly to do so within the context of the fee regulations.

As you may be aware the current cost threshold is £600 and I estimate that it would cost well in excess of this amount to process your request.

As such, and in terms of Section 16(4) of the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 where Section 12(1) of the Act (Excessive Cost of Compliance) has been applied, this represents a refusal notice for the information sought.

By way of explanation, Police Scotland currently still use the legacy crime recording systems that each of the 8 forces that went to make up Police Scotland held in 2013. Each system has its own search capabilities and it has been established that there is no easy way to retrieve cyber flagged crimes in an automated manner. For example, whilst some systems do have a cyber marker that can be used to retrieve relevant crimes, this is not present on all crime systems across the country and so to provide consistent data, each crime report for the areas that do not hold an cyber marker would require to be read to establish the circumstances in relation to your request.

Therefore this is an exercise which would far exceed the cost limit set out in the Fees Regulations.
